THE BOLLES PORGERY CASE. The cause of Pettis' incarceration in the State Prison is on account of being implicated in the Bolles forgery. Pettis is indignant at the manner in which the case was worked up and tried, and says it was only through fraud and chicapery that he is now an inmate of a penal institution. By his request a version of the case, as he tells it, is herewith given:PETTIS' VERSION OF THE CASE.

In the month of March, 1871, Matthew Bolles & Co., of Boston, received a letter from Taunton, Mass., stating that their certificate for $10,000 was deposited in that city. The letter was signed Henry J. Woodford. Subsequently the office of Mr. Bolles was visited by a man giving the name of Holden, who represented that he was a clerk for woodford. On Saturday, March 18, Holden presented to Mr. Bolles a certificate of the Machinists' National Bank of Tannton that $10,000 was eposited with them to Bolles' credit by Messrs. Woodford. Boiles upon this paid Holden $5,000 in order for $5,000, to be paid on the following Mon-day. Mr. Bolles meanwhile discovering that a forgery had been committed, refused on Monday to pay the remaining $5,000. On information repay the remaining $5,000. On information-re-ceived Officer Farley, of New York city, procured a warrant for the arrest of Henry J. Woodford, and arrested Pettis as that individual. Pettis was then taken to the office of Superintendent of Police Kelso, and was there confronted by Mr. Shepard Boiles, who delivered the bonds to Holden, and said that he (Pettis) was not the man, and he was thereupon discharged. After this Pettis saw Roberts, and told him concerning his arrest by Farley, and was informed by Roberts that if he (Pettis) had been identified he (Roberts) could have obtained the bonds.

Roberts, and told him concerning his arrest by Fariey, and was informed by Roberts that if he (Pettis) had been identified he (Roberts) could have obtained the bonds.

THE NEXT PHASE of the case was the appearance of Eustice J. Cooper, who, acting as an agent for Bolles & Co., visited the office of Superintendent Kelso and asked to see Pettis. Accordingly Pettis, in answer to a note received from the office of Superintendent of Police, visited that office and Caotain Irving introduced Cooper to him as a gentleman from the West, and was told by Mr. Cooper that he was desirous of obtaining some stolen bonds. He then told Pettis about the Bolles bonds, and said he would give Pettis $1,000 if he would recover them. Fettis told him he would try, and went and saw Roberts, who said the bonds had been sold, but that he could get them for fifty per cent cash. Pettis told Cooper the facts, and he returned to Boston. Cooper again visited New York and there told Pettis he would give him the fifty per cent for the bonds. Pettis then told Cooper he wanted to have power of attorney, so as not to be mixed up seriously in the affair. Cooper then wrote the form of one, and Pettis told him that would do, when properly signed. Cooper returned to Boston, and a third time visited New York, bringing with him the power of attorney, and in regard to it said he would send it to Pettis. Arrangements were then made by Pettis to meet Roberts, and so Pettis saw Cooper and went with him to Twenty-third street, near the Masonic Temple. Roberts remained in one store and Cooper paid $500. The next bond was for $1,000, and Cooper paid $500. The next bond was for $1,000, and cooper paid $500. The next bond was for $1,000, and cooper paid $500. had received some of his bonds. Pettis was then arrested again in New York, August 17, 1871, and brought to Boston and was told by Chief Constable Jones that it was said some of his officers had the bonds and he wanted Pettis to get them or he would hold him in Taunton at a ball he could not obtain. Pettis was held in Boston for five and one-half months without a trial on the charge of lorgery in the Bolles' case, but was finally tried on a charge of forgery for $19,000, committed six years previously, and out of which several detectives received a percentage. On this charge Pettis was acquitted.

THE FOOR NEW YORK DETECTIVES.

He says of the number of detectives concerned in the New York forgeries that they are using all their influence in Boston to prevent his being pardoned. Pettis says further that detectives are after money, and that there would be very few thieves if detectives were only honest. He has considerable to say regarding Detective William K. Jones, of the Massaccusetts State constabulary.

WHAT PETTIS WILL DO IF PARDONED.

"If I receive an unconditional pardon," says Pettis, "I shall go to New York and give my testimony in the case of the New York forgeries in spite of everything. I know there is considerable opposition to my being pardoned, as en the 20th of October, my counsel, Mr. Hyde, when on a visit to this prison, told me that Roberts had said he would spend $20,000 to keep Pettis in prison, and would make him serve out his full sentence. I have been used unfairly. I can earn a living easily enough at an honest business if the detectives would only let me alone. If I go to New York I know there is an old case that will be brought up against me. But they can't sentence me more than five years, and I will willingly serve that if I can only succeed in breaking up the gang of detectives woo, in a "ministerial capacity" (these words, says Pettis, have out recently been engrated on our language) came on here and are in league with theves and lorgers."

Pettis says the statements made by him are true and he will swear to them, and can produce evidence to prove the correctness of them.

SKATING IN THE PARK.

THE WINTER SPORT INAUGURATED YESTERDAY WITH GREAT GATETY.

The skating season was inaugurated in the Park yesterday. The "pall" went up to the head of the Museum flagstaff early in the morning, and in an hour siter Minnie and Tom, and Jacky and Sissy, as well as every other boy and girl in New York, seemed to have learned the good news. "Halloo! the pali's up; ain't that bully?" shouted scores of youngsters, and in less time than it takes to tell it they had rushed home and obtained the consent of their mothers to visit the Park. thus nelping to make up that "gay and festive scene" which presented itself to the older visitors that knew of it was on hand. They came from divers directions and by devious ways, judging from their make up. Rough and ready were a few, but the mass looked spruce and healthy and well cared for-that character of a throng one mentally remarks when he sees it, "These people have friends." As the alternoon advanced the squadfriends." As the alternoon advanced the squadrons of pieasure seekers increased, and at three o'clock the picture on the lake was one to be remem'ered. The temperature was delightful for the sport. The healthy, life-giving oxygen of the atmosphere was more than usually exhilarating, and it seemed to impart to all a leeling of joyousness and good will that rendered the social gathering of the assemblage one that was really pleasant for a philanthropist to contemplate. It was a cheery, moving throng, a ceaseless panorama, swiit flying and varied as a kaleidoscopic glimpse. All the alternoon and into the night the sport went on. The occasion was charming for the beaux and belies. Such were early to arrive and late to depart, What cared they for the bare and cheerless landscape? Fatigue was out of the question. So long as they could, fland in hand, whirl from one end of the lake to the music of their steel-clad leet, they were content. Not until the rain came on, when the relights were put out, did they think of leaving. The keen observer would notice during the day and evening that there were a large number of suspicious ialls by those of the fair sex who had masculine and youthful altendants. The sequence of such tumbles, which necessitates taking the prostrate girl around the waist to lift her up and to hold her until she recovers from the sudden shock—which they are somenow or other slow to do—seemed to be a special attraction of itself. Then, too, the joily fun that comes from a party of half a dozen who are old friends can hardly be described. One can be so free without rudeness, so miscalivous without ill-will, so intimate without objectsonnois namiliarity, and so affectionate without. "serious intentions" on well ordered, crowded and lighted skating ponds, such as those at the Park, that really it would be difficult to find anywhere and at any time such thorough and legitimate enjoyment. Large as was the crowd and good aumored and kindly disposed as were young and old, there was one great drawback winch som rons of pleasure seekers increased, and at three o'clock the picture on the lake was one to be

ANOTHER BOY MURDER.

A YOUTH OF SEVENTEEN SHOT IN A DRUNKEN BRAWL-HE DIES WITHOUT TELLING WHO SHOT HIM.

Rapidly following the story about the youth Patrick Walsh having been fatally shot in some mysterious way there came to Police Headquarters years, named John Mangin, had just died at his home, No. 535 West Pitty'third street, of a knife wound, which he had received on Thursday night. The report agreed in every detail, except the one weapon, with the account of young Walsh's case. Mangin from the moment of his discovery by his mother, lying wounded on the door step of her shanty, up to the time when he became unconscious, rejused to say how and by whom he had been hurt. He died without making any Coroner Woltman went to the home of the youth's mother yesterday afternoon for the purpose of making a post-mortem examination of Mangin's body. He empaneiled a jury and went with the party into the room where the young man's body lay to witness the process of dissection. The dead form and the room were in a miserable condition of neglect, and the atmosphere in the apartment was so horrible that some of the jurymen became qualmish. The result of the examination revealed that Mangin had not been stabbed, but had been shot. The wound was in the lan's back, and was so small that it appeared like the aperture which can be made by a small knife being turned after being inserted into a person's flest. The dept in to which the builet went seems to indicate that the pistol was discharged very near to Mangin's body. The projectile went through the great sacrosciatic foramen, or aperture, into the peivic cavity, and caused a wound in the stomach's coating. It then passed down and lodged just over the left guteal region. Peritonitis resulted and kilied young Mangin. The jury rendered a verdict in accordance with these discoveries. It now remains to be learned how Mangin was shot and by whom. His mother says that every evening when he had returned from his work, which was that of a helper in a foundry, he left the nouse as soon as his supper was over. On Christmas Eve he left his home at about seven o'clock, and she did not see him again until after some unknown persons had brought him to and hid him on the doorstep of her shanty. He was then bleeding profusely, and the doorstep was stained by blood. He refused to tell her bow he had been hurt. He lingered until the next day without medical attendance, and finally died at mine o'clock yesterday morning.

A man named Sernard McEntee, who resides next door to the Mangins, says that he saw the deceased young man on Tenth avenue, with several other lively tellows, before he was wounded. John Biggin, a resident of Stryker's alley, which runs out of Filty-second street, also saw Mangin with a hilarious party on Christmas Eve. The most important witness yet found pose of making a post-mortem examination of Mangin's body. He empanelled a jury and went

TRAGEDY IN BROOKLYN.

A CHICKEN THIEF SHOT AND FATALLY WOUNDED

Shortly before ten o'clock last night a German named Christian Ecks, who keeps a bakery at the corner of Schenectady avenue and Union street, Brooklyn, shot and fatally wounded Thomas Corr, a chicken thief, whom he detected in the act of stealing chickens from the yard in the rear of his house. Previous to the shooting, while Ecks was in his store attending to customers, he heard a noise in the yard. He had suffered repeatedly from the depredations of the poultry thieves who favest the neighborhood, and when he went to investigate the cause of the disturbance he armed himself with a double-barrelled snotgun, loaded with buckshot. As he stepped from the back door he saw a man run from the hen house toward the fence. He called upon the intruder to stand, but without effect, as the man endeavored to scale the fence. Just as the thier placed his hands on the top of the fence Ecks fired at him, the charge striking him in the right arm and side, inflicting a terrible wound. The wounded man with a cry of pain dropped to the ground. A crowd soon gathered, and the thief was carried into the bakery. An examination of his injuries showed that he was in a dying condition.

examination of his injuries showed that he was in a dying condition.

Roundsman Barry and Officer Chichester, who were attracted to the spot by the explosion of the fiftearms, summoned an ambulance, and the wounded man was removed to the Iwelfth precinct station house. Ecks was arrested and also taken there.

On reaching the station the dying thief with great difficulty said that his name was Thomas Corr, and identified Ecks as the man who shot him. Corr was then removed to the City Hospital. The physicians pronounced his wounds fatal, and Coroner Jones was notified to take his ante-mortem statement. Ecks was locked up.

PROBABLE MURDER OF A CHILD.

Yesterday alternoon about three o'clock a tragedy occurred at No. 43 Franklin street, Greenlong before noon. It was the old story-skating port, though the latal termination has not yet got over his Christmas debauch, and, feeling very suris, quarreiled with his wife, finally beating her brutally with a baluster. The neighbors, shocked at the severity of the blows and her fearshocked at the severity of the blows and her fearnui shrieks, interfered, whereupon Ewen turned upon them and in his fury aimed a blow at a Mrs.
Coilus. He did not strike her, however, but the blow reil on the head of her child, aged four years, inflicting a serious, and, as Dr. Asheim says, a latal wound. The neighbors then closed in on Ewen and secured him till the arrival of the police, to whom he was transferred.

ANOTHER MALPRACTICE HORROR.

TWO FEMALE PHYSICIANS ARRESTED ON A CHARGE OF MURDERING A BROOKLYN WOMAN.

At a late hour last night Sergeant Kelly and Detective Woolsake, of the Fourth Brooklyn police precinct, arrested Johanna White, aged thirtytwo years, and her servant, Margaret Smith, aged eighteen years, at their place of residence, No. 98 Stanton street, New York, on a charge of murder. These women, who state that they are lemale physicians, are accused of having caused the death of a German woman named Christina Sielett, who died at her residence, No. 208 Myrtle avenue, on the stainst, from malpractice. Coroner Jones was notified shortly after the death of Mrs. Sielett to hold an inquest. A post-mortem examination was made of the remains, and it revealed the lact that the woman died from the effects of an abortion. The inquiry by the Coroner was adjourned with a view of securing the guilty parties. two years, and her servant, Margaret Smith, aged In some manner suspicion fell upon "Dr." Mrs.

BURGLARS SURPRISED.

TWO MEN DISCOVERED ON THE ROOF OF NO. 292 BROADWAY, BUT ARE NOT CAPTURED. Between eight and nine o'clock last evening an officer, standing at the corner of Reade street and Broadway, discovered two men on the roof of No. 292 Broadway, just opposite. An alarm was instantly given, and in a few min-utes the entire block in which the building is situated was completely surrounded by policemen. On entering the building, which is occupied by A. Le Nuno as a pocketbook factory and store and by several real estate brokers, the officers found all the doors leading from the various apartments had been forced open. A closer investigation disclosed the fact that the scuttle had also been burst open, thus showing the manner in which the intruders had obtained admission. Now it was that the search for the burglars began, every nook and corner being rigorously examined, but to no purpose, for the game had taken fright and flown, no one knew where. Sergeant Douglas, of the Sixth precinct, delved into the sub-cellar and roamed about in the most promiscuous mahner possible for at least half an hour, but failed to nnearth snything in the way of nouse breakers, although he cid fall over at least one sninbreaker. Whether or not the burglars succeeded in carrying off any goods could not be ascertained, as the occupants of the premises had not been found up to a late nour last night. building is situated was completely surrounded by

DEFRAUDING THE REVENUE.

A FIFTEEN THOUSAND DOLLAR CAPTURE OF

SMUGGLED GOODS. For the past ten days Special Treasury Agents P. E. Howe and Thomas Brown have had under surveillance in the Public Free Stores sixteen large cases of about four feet square each, the sworn contents of which were, as made by affidavit at the custom House :- Shells manufactured into boxes, work baskets. &c.," the value of each box being about $40. Colonel F. E. Howe and Mr. box being about $40. Colonel F. E. Howe and Mr. Brown, thinking that from their great weight there was a negro in the fence, cut a private mark on each case and waited developments. To throw further dust into the eyes of the government officials the goods were carted to another warehouse, and while in transit their marks and numbers were changed. The holders of the goods reckoned without Uncle Sam however, and left the Treasury officials' tell-tale marks on the packages. For twenty-four hours, while the process of changing warehouses was going on, the officials managed to lose track of the cases, but through private information discovered them again and watched them during business hours, waiting to see where their next trip would be. Yesterday morning some of them were carted away to a well known auction house on Broadway. The truckman woo had brought them drove off after delivering them, the officer taking the number of his truck and his name and address. After a short time the auctioneer's assistants pried open the cases and commenced taking out the contents. While so engaged the Treasury officials entered and commenced helping them in their task. That they were unwelcome vistors is easily understood. The goods turned out to consist of opera glasses, electroplated silverware, handsome sets of knives and forks in mahogany cases, card receivers, tea sets, all of a very valuable kind, and on which there is a very high duty. The auct oncer was indignant and said he had advertised the goods for sale, and knew of no fraud being committed on the government in their importation, and that the would be defrauded of his advances it the goods were seized on behalf of the Customs. The officials told him sympathetically that they regretted he had been made a dupe of, and forthwith carted off four of the cases to the seizure department of the Custom House. The remaining tweive cases were seized subsequently in the Free Warehouse, where they now are and will be Brown, thinking that from their great weight department of the Custom House. The remaining twelve cases were seized subsequently in the Free Warchouse, where they now are and will be confiscated for fraud. The total value of the seizure is from $12,000 to $15,000. The importer, who is held to be guilty of perjury, will be arrested either to-day or to-morrow.

SNOW ON THE CROSS-WALKS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD!-The crosswalks in West Twenty third street, from Sixth avenue to Broadway are in a very dangerous condition. The sweeping machines of the car companies piled the snow in heaps at the sides of their tracks, and right across the crosswaik. It has since trozen hard, and has become very suppery by being walked over. Is it not the business of the police to clear the crossings? Yours respectfully,

T. M. RODMAN.

HERALD MARINE CORRESPONDENCE.

FIRE ISLAND, Dec 24, 1874.

Your valuable paper of Dec 22 contains a statement made by Egbert H Terry, master of schr Ada M Hallock, giving the particulars of his passage from Dec 16 until he anchored under the lee of Fire Island Bar, as he states, about 10 o'clock PM of Dec 18. This is no doubt true, as his signal light was signted, and, supposing it to be that of a dehing reseal no more attention was discounted. states, about no croce as of beet, and, supposing it to be that of a fishing vessel, no more attention was directed to it. In the morning I sighted her again, and found she had a signal set, and proceeded at once to ascertain what was wanted. Capt Terry stated that he set a signal of distress. I say he did not. Had he set his ensign with union down I should have known what he wanted but thinking, from the kind of signal, that the schooner was inward bound and needed a pilot, I decided to but one of the crew on board and bring her into the inlet. I ordered the boat in readiness, having about one mile to draw the boat and carriage through the sand, which is not the work of a moment, and would have boarded her in twenty minutes more had not other aid arrived. Capt Jeffrey, with his sloop, lay in a more favorable position, having only about two miles to sail with fair wind and tide, and arrived at the schooner very soon. From Capt Terry's statement one would suppose that the crew from the life-saving station made no move to render any assistance, but that is untrue, and I hold the captain responsible for misropresentiant to the public the facts of the cambles to the service and to the LEANDER THURBER, Keeper, Crew.
